ORGANISATIONAL SKILLS

good time management, work under pressure During many years of work in the journalism, I learned how important teamwork is, as well as that good preparation and organization. I acquired decision-making and responsibility for their consequences during extraordinary news events that require a quick, organized and efficient reaction in a very short period of time. Many years of work in a professional journalistic environment gave me the experience of mentoring and developing pedagogic skills, which I am further improving in my work with students at the University. Both journalism and teaching taught me how to adapt to different systems of work organization and management.

COMMUNICATION AND INTERPERSONAL SKILLS

empathy, active listening, emotional intelligence Write I acquired strong communication skills through daily work with people of different professions and personalities, and to a large extent during trips to different parts of the world. I developed the ability to adapt communication messages and tools to target groups in unforeseen situations in which opportunities change very quickly, in which business success depends on finding the right information at the right time, as well as the way to convey it.
